

DEMO DAY OVERVIEW

My demo day project is called Crash Landing On... It's a full stack interactive language game that not only teaches children basic Vietnamese vocabulary, but also introduces real locations operated by people of the same culture. It's geared towards all children ages 7 - 12, particularly Vietnamese children to create more interest in their own culture and language. There's a prevalent disconnect from the language in 3rd generation children born to immigrants. I would like this project to create a fun approach to learning for everyone, particularly this generation.

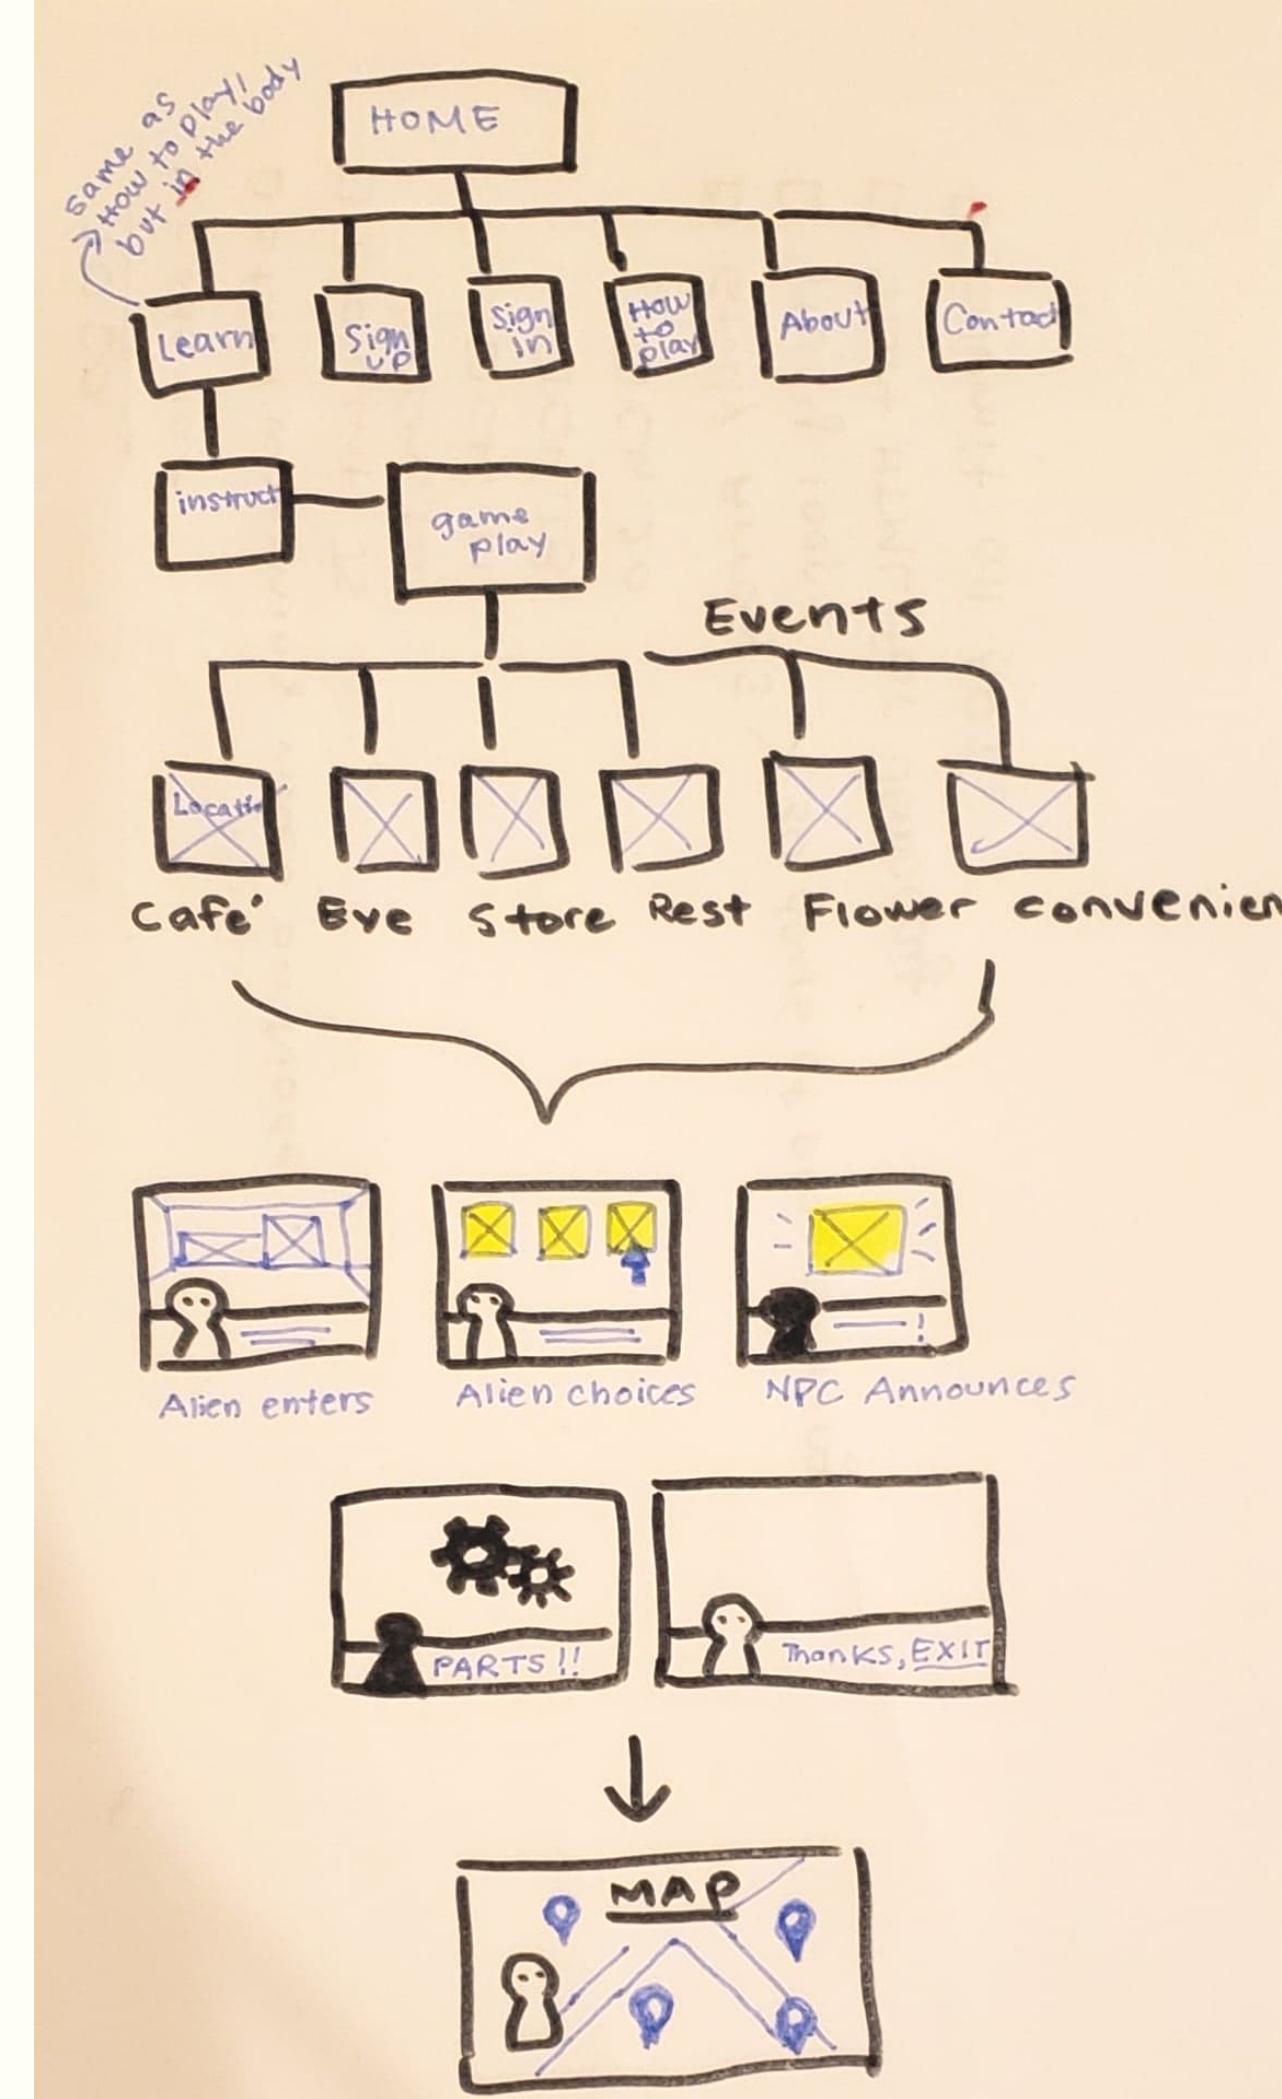

This is a full stack site with a registration, sign up page, and database for user information. This includes data gathered during game play, objects the user collects, and a section where players comment and rate their experience. The user plays as an alien whose ship has crashed, in this scenario, Little Saigon, a line of Vietnamese-owned businesses along Dorchester Ave in Boston, MA.

The alien has lost 6 parts of their ship, and must interact with the locals to find them. This comes with a price, you must purchase something from their business. Through the alien's search, the user learns vocabulary of various common objects from food, to glasses, flowers, and more. Each purchase is brought back to the alien's ship mates and kept in their inventory. The ship parts are also counted along the journey.

SYSTEMS DOWN!

FIND THE MISSING PIECES OF YOUR
SHIP FROM THE TOWN LOCALS.

You and your crew are on course for the planet Obiwan when your ship is struck by an asteroid. The ship plummets and lands on an unknown place, with 5 essential pieces of the engine scattered. Explore the town nearby and collect these for your mechanic. Talk with the locals and see if they can help. Ready?

Com Thit Nuong

Rice with Grilled Marinated Meat

I was served this at the Vietnamese sustenance house called, 'Ánh Hồng. It came with flavorful grilled flesh of an animal, white grains, pickled plants, and a fried unborn chicken bird.
